A Family Interview

Jim's Grandma Bella lived on a farm long ago. Jim wondered what her life was like when she was a young girl.

Jim got an idea! He would interview Grandma Bella. To interview means to ask a person questions and to write down the answers.

What is an interview?

My Interview with Bella

Jim What was life like on the farm when you were young?

Bella We didn't have a refrigerator. We had to put a block of ice into an ice box to keep our food cold. My little brother got in trouble for leaving the door open!

Jim What did your father do?

Bella My father was a farmer.
He planted corn and wheat.

Jim Did you have chores?

Bella Oh, yes! Every day, before going to school, I fed the chickens.

How is keeping food cold different today from long ago?

Bella's Time Line

Jim What was school like?

Bella My whole school was only one room! Older kids helped little ones. We wrote with pens dipped in ink.

Jim What did you do at recess?

Bella We climbed trees. We played games like Hide and Seek, too!

Two Native American Groups

There were many Native American groups. Two of these groups were the Cherokee and the Chippewa. They lived near lakes and rivers.

The Cherokee made homes out of wood, mud, and grass. Chippewa homes were made from tree bark.

Chippewa girls and boys helped their families. The girls gathered nuts and rice. They also made clothes from animal skins. The boys helped hunt and fish.

How did Chippewa boys help their families?

A Cherokee Family Today

Meet Wilma. Wilma is a Cherokee girl who lives in Ohio. Long ago, Wilma's family lived in Tennessee.

Wilma's mom tells stories about their family from Tennessee. The boys hunted with bows and arrows. The girls made clay bowls and helped their mothers sew.

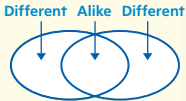

Today, Wilma helps her family just like girls did in Tennessee long ago. She helps her grandpa cut the lawn.

How is Wilma like the Cherokee girls of long ago?

Three Ships Sail

Long ago, a Native American group called the Taino lived on an island near North America. The Taino were farmers and fishers. They planted corn. They fished for food.

One day the Taino looked out on the Atlantic Ocean. Three ships with white sails were close by.

How did the Taino get food?

Columbus Arrives

The ships were called the Nina, the Pinta, and the Santa Maria. Christopher Columbus was the captain of the ships. He and his men were searching for gold.

Columbus and his men were almost out of food and water when they saw land. The Taino paddled out to help them.

Later, Columbus gave the Taino glass beads and brass bells. The Taino gave Columbus and his men gifts of parrots and gold.

What did Columbus give to the Taino?

Event

Columbus Takes Land

Columbus put the Spanish flag on the Taino land. He said that the land now belonged to Spain.

Settlers Arrive

After Columbus, other people sailed across the Atlantic Ocean to America. Some decided to make America their home. They were called settlers.

The first settlers to move to America were from Spain. They moved to an area in Florida. They called this place St. Augustine. Today, St. Augustine is the oldest city in the United States.

A Free Country

More settlers came from England to live in America. Most wanted to be free from England.

The settlers had a war with England. George Washington helped America win the war. Later, he became America's first President. The President is the leader of our country.

Who was George Washington?

Freedom for Everyone

Years later, another great President cared about freedom. His name was Abraham Lincoln. He knew that slavery was wrong. Slavery is one person taking away another person's freedom.

Some people in our country wanted to end slavery. Others did not. People in some states fought against people in other states. It was called the Civil War. When the war ended, slavery ended.

What is slavery?

Around the World

Freedom is important all around the world. This girl from India celebrates her country's freedom.

Freedom Across America

After the Civil War, some areas became crowded with people. Families moved further west for more room. The United States grew larger and larger.

People continued to come from other countries for freedom and a better life. They were called immigrants.

Some immigrants arrived on ships to Ellis Island in New York. They could see the Statue of Liberty.

The Statue of Liberty stands for freedom. It was a gift to the United States from France.

Who are immigrants?

Marching for Freedom

Not long ago, black children could not go to school with white children. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., gave speeches and went on marches to change this.

People

Coretta Scott King

Coretta was the wife of Martin Luther King, Jr. She said, "We . . . dream of a world being reborn in freedom."

Today all children go to school together.
In America, we must work toward freedom today, just as we did long ago.
